Healing the Survivor of Child Abuse

Introductory Notes
Adult survivors of child abuse will often require several sessions of hypnotherapy before they can fully trust the therapist, and may consistently test the boundaries of the client-therapist relationship.

This is a framework script that is a designed to be used alongside others and should always be adjusted to suit your client's personal situation.

Begin with your favorite Induction and Deepener from Hypnotic World. NOTE

And as you allow yourself to feel relaxed and comfortable I want you to create a place in your mind where you feel totally and absolutely safe.

It doesn't matter where it is - but ideally, it could be a place where you have found comfort and solace in the past.

And I wonder if you can remember feelings of knowing that everything was alright and allow yourself to expand upon these feelings, safe in the knowledge that in the future - you will always be in a position to protect yourself in the best possible way for you.

Create in your mind the most perfect, harmonious environment - notice the warm colors - gentle sounds - scenes that appear to you as though in a dream of beautiful images or patterns.

This is going to become a very special place to you because it's your safe place - and for you - safe stands for a safe and friendly environment - so whenever you want to feel these feelings of peace and tranquility - just think in your mind the word - safe.

Safe is your key word for post hypnotic response - and every time that you hear the word safe - either in your mind or spoken by me - that is just how you will feel.

And I want you to take the word safe - and place it up there in the top right-hand corner of your mind - ready and accessible whenever you need it.

Because in the past I know there were times when you didn't feel safe. You experienced all kinds of mixed up feelings and emotions during the times that we talked about, when you were abused.

I know - and you know - that we cannot change what happened in the past - but what we can do is to change the way that we feel about it now - and changing the way that we feel in situations like this is healthy and desirable - and you desire it - you really want to feel better about those (months/years).

You've been carrying around with you feelings of guilt and shame - often children who are being abused are told by their perpetrator that they are in the wrong or that no-one will believe or love them if they tell someone what's happening.

As a child, you may have believed that - after all - how could you have known any better?

Some children even feel guilty because they feel they enjoyed the act - and that guilt can remain dormant for a long time. Of course, there are so many issues involved because once the sexual feelings have been aroused - the body can respond in the way that it's been programmed to respond - with a drive that would naturally have occurred at a much later age when hormones dictated they would.

Whatever those feelings were - you can now totally and completely accept - that no child should ever be abused in any way.

And I want you to visualize a screen on the inside of your mind - and onto that screen I want you to project an image of yourself - or some other child - at the same age as you were at the time you were abused.

Notice everything about that child - so much younger, smaller than now - and helpless - you feel the same love and protection that you would feel for your own child in that situation - this should never have happened.

And as you sit or lie here - watching this inner child - you can feel as detached as you need to be - but you can also project any hurt or angry or other negative feelings that you've been carrying around for so long into this child.

In a chair - opposite the child is the person who did those things to her/him.

See that person now - see him/her for what he/she really is - a despicable, pathetic, irresponsible human animal.

At one time he/she may have seemed big or strong or important - but now you see this shrivelled up man/woman - sitting there - looking frightened because of the consequences of their actions.

And as you project those angry or negative feelings onto the child - feel - and experience - even at this safe distance - power and strength building up in your child. Your inner child is now much stronger and determined to let this person know exactly what how bad it was that he/she did to you.

And here, in the safety of hypnosis - I want you to confront and challenge your perpetrator - remembering your inner strength and the power of mind you now have.

Just say - whatever you need to say - or do - to make you feel better about all this.

If you like, ask him/her - why he/she did such a thing. You can do this in your mind or aloud - just release all those negative feelings that have been confined within you since that time.

You can shout, or scream at him/her if you wish - just do whatever needs to be done.

And if he/she tries to explain - listen to that pathetic excuse. Listen to it with your adult mind - and decide for yourself - what to do.

If your inner child is sad or frightened then your adult self can comfort and reassure your child.

Let your child know that none of this was her/his fault in any way. Say or do whatever you need to say or do to make your child feel better.

I'll be quiet for a few moments whilst you watch that screen, and you can indicate to me when you've said or done whatever you need to say or do.

Pause until signal is given.	PAUSE

Good - now one by one - or all together if you prefer - I want you to release all - every one of those negative feelings - realizing that they now serve no purpose in your life.

You may decide to forgive - now - or some time in the future - as part of your own healing process.

Over the coming days and weeks, you'll find yourself feeling so much better and happier - having released those feelings from deep within.

You'll find yourself thinking of them less and less as you realize that the most important thing for you now is to concentrate on the present and creating the happiest and healthiest possible future for you and the people you love.

Harboring negative feelings and emotions only causes you harm. No-one else - so you decide to let them go - here in the safety of hypnosis. But always remember - your safe place and your post-hypnotic conditioned response - creating for you a safe and friendly environment.

It's as though the world is beginning to smile at you now. You feel lighter and happier than you have known for such a long time.

When you leave here today it will be as though you're looking at the world through a new pair of eyes - regaining the sparkle of what was rightfully yours - everything looks crystal clear to you and you move forward, progressing, advancing, enjoying every moment of life from now on.

And there may still be odd times when you remember what happened in those earlier years. But as those memories become more and more distant - so they become less important as they lose their significance.

You concentrate now on the present - and creating the wonderful life that is rightfully yours to enjoy.

In a moment I'm going to count from one to five and at the count of five, you'll be wide awake.

One, two, three, four, five.
