Self Criticism

Begin with your favorite Induction and Deepener from Hypnotic World.

As you continue to enjoy this relaxing feeling of calm and tranquillity, I would like you to allow your mind to wander wherever it will - and you don't even need to listen to me - because your subconscious mind hears every word that is said.

And isn't it nice to be able to pay no attention at times - as you become thoroughly absorbed in doing something you truly enjoy.

But of course if I draw your attention to listening to something that is really irrelevant to you then you may find it impossible to resist - at first - but you can learn - yes you really can - how to control that inner voice.

And your subconscious mind knows exactly what I am talking about - and it also knows how to switch off - for this is something you have been learning the whole of your life.

When you switch off a light and the room becomes dark you don't see what was obvious before.

When you switch off the radio or TV you can no longer hear the music that's played or the words that are uttered - and yet they are still there - but you are no longer tuned in.

For too long now you have been tuning into your inner, critical voice - the voice that tells you that you can't do something - or you are not good enough - or any other of those negative suggestions or implications that have been holding you back from doing what you really want to do.

But soon - very soon - all this is going to change - for instead of listening to your self-criticism you will be hearing words of encouragement and positive suggestions that make you feel good.

Now - most people who pay too much attention to their critical voice have been influenced in some way by events that happened in the past - often an unsupportive adult, older sibling or so-called friend.

So to eliminate any possible past negative influences I want you - just for a moment or two - to tune into that critical voice and hear an example of something it says.

Go inside and listen to it now as I'm quiet for a moment or two and nod your head when you can hear that voice.

Pause for a few moments until client signals.

Now - what is that voice saying? Who, exactly, does it sound like?

At first, it may sound like your own voice - this is because it has become integrated into your way of thinking - but if you listen closer, it will remind you of someone else.

So listen now and nod your head when you know whose voice or words this reminds you of.

Pause again for a few moments until client signals.

Good - now I want you to follow that voice back to a time when you heard those words - or very similar words - spoken by that someone else.

Project the voice and its owner onto a large white screen and see yourself in the picture too.

Those words - have been putting you down in some way - how did they make you feel?

You were probably much younger when you first heard them - perhaps smaller and less knowledgeable and you didn't have the life experience that you now have.

But you are no longer a child who is easily influenced by others - you are now a mature adult with a mind of your own - you can distinguish right from wrong and you know that the criticism was wrong for you.

Even if, in the remote chance the words spoken were true at the time - you can realize that the adult's approach was wrong - for what you really needed was confidence building - encouragement and explanations to help you to understand what you needed to do.

Phase out the critical adult from your screen and replace that person with the self-assured, confident, adult version of yourself.

Hear the words that should have been spoken - now being said very gently in a way that is easy for you to understand.

Hear words of praise and encouragement - positive phrases that achieve the results in a far more effective way.

Turn up the screen - make it brighter and happier - color it with vibrant hues and joyful sounds.

And know that whatever it was that happened in the past was not your fault - you were just a child who always did the best that they could.

Now let that screen disappear from your mind - imagine it is the end of the show and the curtains are closing - the lights become brighter and you are resting here in this room - listening only to the sound of my voice.

You are back to the here and now with not a moment to lose.

It is time to get on with enjoying your life and taking wide strides in the great outdoors.

You have listened to self-criticism for long enough - perhaps putting off doing what you really wanted to do.

The world is your oyster and this is your life - your time to tune into positive thoughts and tune out of the ones that have been holding you back.

You are good enough - you were always good enough - you just didn't believe in yourself enough - and all that is changing now because you are a friend and a guide to yourself.

Your subconscious mind is now your best friend - no more listening to self-doubt and telling yourself that you cannot do this or that - you know that you are as capable as anyone else - perhaps even more so than many others.

You have life experience - you have maturity - you are sensitive and caring and kind - and you are kind to yourself - just as you are kind to others.

Imagine yourself in a situation where previously you would have doubted your ability or criticised some aspect of yourself.

Would you treat your best friend like that? Of course not - but that is exactly what you were doing.

But that's all in the past and you now concentrate on the present - the here and now - and the future that holds the promise of abundant opportunities.

In the present and future, you have new ways of thinking and feeling.

Instead of thinking, "I can't do this," you tell yourself, "Go on - have a go - you have nothing to lose and everything to gain."

Remember the saying, "If you don't ask the answer is always no."

You are moving forward now - becoming the assertive, confident person that you know you really are.

You have the ability - you have plenty of ability and you can do whatever you set your mind to.

You are a good and worthwhile person and you love and respect yourself - because - after all - you are your own best friend.

No more doubts - no more self-criticism - from now on your inner voice is encouraging you - praising you - being kind to you and in turn, you respond positively and warmly to these positive words.

It doesn't matter what happened yesterday or last week or ten years ago - because now is now - you are focusing on the present and tuning into your positive thoughts.

And these suggestions are firmly embedded in your subconscious mind and grow stronger and stronger as each day goes by.

In a moment, I'm going to count the numbers from one to five and at the count of five, you will be fully alert and refreshed and ready to allow these suggestions to work for you.

One - two - three - coming slowly back - four - eyelids beginning to flutter and five - eyes open - wide awake, mind and body returning to normality.
